800 Guardsmen Sent Out by Gov. Carey. for Rescue Duty

By PETER KUHSS

Hurricane Belle swept up the Atlantic Coast with winds up to 100 miles an hour last night and headed straight for Long Island as thousands of area residents fled

The hurricane's advance winds struck Long Island shortly after 10 P.M., bringing drenching rains and high tides that buffeted costal areas already evacuated.

In Bay Shore, L. I., winds ripped up trees and shrubs after the storm had skirted the Jersey shore, moving between 25 and 30 miles an hour toward the center of Long Island Tight Little Storm'

The hurricane was described by the National Weather Service as "a tight little storm," its full force concentrated in a circle with a 100-mile radius. As the storm headed for Long Island, officials in the metropolitan area were taking no chances, and thousands of residents in low-lying and coastal areas of New York and New Jersey were evacuated during the day,

About 300 patients from the South Shore Psychiatric Center on Staten Island were transferred to the inland Willowbrook Developmental Center during the night as city officials braced for the first hurricane of the season.

Metropolitan area officials said tides were running less than had been predicted.

Rally of Youth in India's Governing Party Rocuses Spotlight on Mrs. Gandhi's Son

NEW DELHI, Aug. 9-The youth wing of India's dominant political party today held a rally apparently designed in part to promote Sanjay Gandhi, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's 29-year-old son.

In the first national rally ever held by the Youth Congress, several thousand delegates gathered at a gaily-decorated fairground here for two days of speeches, songs and cultural programs devoted to the theme of resurgent youth.

"The elder politicians should encourage the youth to come up, and not stand in their way."

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Aug. 9 light-wing Christian forces ere reported today to be massing on two fronts to launch new attacks against Palestinan and leftist positions.

News of the reported concentrations came from sources in the central leadership of the Palestinian groups and the Lebanese leftist-Moslem alliance.

A rightist radio station said that the area of Al Jamhour, a Christian stronghold about seven miles east of here on the had been decrared a military zone and that a dusk-to-dawn curfew had been put into force there.

The leftist press said reconnaissance information received by the Palestinian-leftist leadership indicated that the right-ists had gathered as many as 100 military vehicles at Al Jam-hour in addition to a large number of militiamen. The troops were said to have begun moving toward the Christian village of Al Louiza a few miles down the road.

When they hit Fez, they were hot on the trail

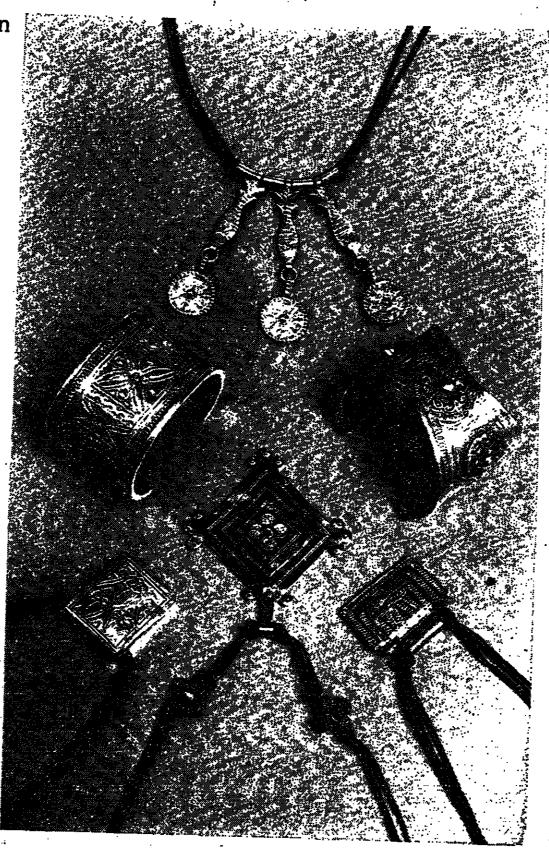

The adventure began when a well known American jewelry company called Lisner picked two designers and entrusted them with a mission. Their instructions were probably pasted inside their Proceed to passports: "Proceed to Morocco. Don't come back without exotic, exciting ideas that will reflect the ethnic fashion trend."

We've only heard pieces and parts of their story. For instance, there's a tattered cablegram from Casablanca with one word, "Zilch."

Then there were three words from Marrakesh "Some hope here." It seems a mysterious figure in a burnoose peeked out from behind a camel and whispered "You'll find it in Fez." And it was indeed in the souks of the ancient capital of Fez that the treasure hunters heard the happy sound of hammers on brass.

Moroccan artisans (seventh sons of seventh sons of artisans) were copying priceless old Bedouin designs.

Jewelry, main floor. Fifth Avenue, White Plains, Manhasset, N.Y., Short Hills, Ridgewood/Paramus, N.J., St. Davids, Pa Each piece was different and each (glory Hallelujah) exciting and exotic. It was Mission Accomplished at last.

Now you have an adventure in store, too. Breeze into air-conditioned Altman's and enjoy this handsome collection of stylized animal replicas, Moorish filigree, paisley patterns, Koran shapes, bold architectural designs.

These are all American made interpretations of the brass pieces Lisner's experts brought proudly home. All are in satiny (non-shiny) antique-looking metal with gold or silver color finish.

Anything here would add an in-fashion flavor to your daytime flannels and your sixish silks. Each wide cuff bracelet is 10.00. Chokers on cords, 5.00. Fish pendant, 12.50, Square pendant, 10.00.

At these prices, you should also collect some super gifts to put away till Christmas.

Why the fastest way to Tokyo is also the fastest way to Hong Kong, Osaka, Seoul, Manila, Okinawa, Taipei, and Singapore.

It's really quite simple.

Pan Am's daily non-stop 747 SP from New York gets you to Tokyo over 2 hours faster than any other airline.

Once in Tokyo you can continue on Pan Am to Hong Kong or Osaka.

Or if you'd like, you can get convenient connections (without losing the 2 hours you've saved) on another airline going to Seoul, Ökinawa, Taipei, Manila, or Singapore.

Now that you know why it's the fastest flight, we'd like to tell you why it's the most comfortable flight. For those of you who like the idea of eating in a fine restaurant, there is our first class upper-deck dining room. There are 2 sittings (one for lunch, one for dinner) with a choice from 4 entrees at each meal. Like in a fine restaurant, it's best to reserve a table. (You should reserve a table when you reserve your flight.)

If you're traveling economy, at lunch and dinner you have a choice from 3 entrees from our international menu of Oriental or Continental entrees.

If you'd like to take a walk after dinner, go ahead. The 747 SP is one of the roomiest planes in the air. Maybe you'd like to take in one of the two movies we offer. There's no charge in first class, a nominal charge of $2.50 in economy.

Although we try to give you every convenience in flight, we can't put you up on the plane every night, so we've arranged a low price hotel program.

YOU CAN SAVE UP TO 20% ON OUR HOTEL DEAL.

There was a time when hotel bargains were available only to air travelers who bought a tour. Now businessmen (or any Pan Am passenger) can take advantage of a hotel deal. And save themselves up to 20% compared with the published offerings of other major airlines, for the same hotels.

Pan Am's "Pacific on a Pass" program takes in 85 first class or deluxe hotels in 29 cities in 15 countries: in the Pacific. You and your travel agent will be able to calculate the instant savings available on the hotels you select because it takes in the little extras that add up. Like local taxes and service charges, and some other benefits you might want to find out for yourself.

Just ask your travel agent for Pan Am's "Pacific on a Pass" program, PAH 575. He'll fill you in on the details and conditions, and take care of the rest.

See your travel agent.

Social Contrasts Are Acute in Cairo

CAIRO, Aug. 9-In trilling voices, the Egyptian bridesmaids gave the quavering Arab cry known as the "zaghrouta" as a sumptuous wedding procession wound through a Cairo hotel this

Yet the cries, the fine gowns, the costly perfumes, the elegant bridal couple, even the hired belly dancer leading the parade, failed to gladden the heart of a gray-haired merchant whose little shop stood near by for dec-

These new rich," he muttered to an old acquaintance. When they get themselves more money they go out and get a new bride.'

Luxury and prosperity have blossomed in many forms in and around Cairo under the tolerant rule of Egypt's President, Anwar el-Sadat, who took office in 1970. But a former Cairo resident returning here for the first time since the austere era of Mr. Sadat's predecessor. Gamal Abdel Nasser, finds that many Cairenes are deriving surprisingly little pleasure from these new good things of life.

This is partly because poverty and envy are wide-spread in this metropolis of more than eight million. It is partly because many new luxury articles here grow di-lapidated or break down. It is partly because of overcrowding as the city's populace has swollen in recent years, partly because of painful inflation and partly because some Cairenes reject what they see as godless

This shortage of joy, these somber crosscurrents, are a source of special concern to some reflective Arabs now that the Lebanese civil war has shown how large-scale violence can erupt from social and economic tensions in an Arab country. "Cairo is a sort of boom city, but in a limited way; it has islands of affluence in an ocean of misery," a travel-er was told by Clovis Maksoud, a prominent Lebanese editor and former Arab League official, who was visiting here last week. "This can be very satisfying for a few who are classclimbers." Dr. Maksoud continued. "But in the long run it presents the danger of accentuating social and economic divisions. In Beirut we have experienced what can happen when a veneer of affluence covers a volcano of social ferment. Dr. Maksoud was staying at the modern Shepheard's Hotel beside the Nile. An earlier Shepheard's was burned in 1952 by Cairo rioters, spurred on by the ultraconservative Moslem Brotherhood, who attacked the posh gathering places of foreigners and the Egyptian

Now, after years of drabness during the Nasser era, parts of Cairo have again aca certain swank, thanks largely to Government policies of encouraging private enterprise and easing import restrictions. These policies have spawned fancy weddings and other forms of conspicuous consumption by ble

the rich, and a variety of modest pleasures for lesser

Hundreds of recently imported Mercedes-Benz sedans cruise Cairo's boulevards nowadays, although many of them have had their distinctive hood ornaments filched.

The courtyard of the Immobilia, a dusty old office building is now adorned by a gleaming, Western-style hamburger stand that serves imported ketchup, a prized rarity here a decade ago. The stand also has an espresso nachine, but it has been out of order for days.

One of the elderly cargo-bearing feluccas sailing the Nile where it flows through Cairo is now gaily decorated with cardboard boxes that contained imported whisky, a target for the in-dignation of Islamic traditionalists.

airline Government adorned with computer terminals-which also seem to be out of order a good dealand with a new name "Egyptair," which reflects the fact that President Sadat, an ardent nationalist, has changed this country's name back to Egypt from United Arab Republic, as it was dubbed in the Nasser era.

In those days the national airline labored under the name United Arab Airlines. This was often shortened to U.A.A., which Cairo cynics said really stood for "Use Another Airline.'

TV Sets in a Village

Signs of prosperity-and lack of pleasure in it-extend to the area of the ancient Saggara pyramids 20 miles south of Cairo. A 20-family hamlet there has sprouted three television aerials in the last five years.
"We like it here but the young men want to move into Cairo to earn more money," a visitor was told by Ali Abu Hagar, a professional antiquities guard who is one of the hamlet's elders. But because of the crowding in Cairo, the young men are sometimes obliged to change their plans and move back to the hamlet 'It's difficult to find a flat Khouli, a Government Egyp-tologist, said, shaking his head "and that makes some of the young men nervous." Understandably, buildings have been sprouting up outside Cairo, leading in the city now," Dr. Ali el-to complaints that they have been marring the landscape near other pyramids. "I'm trying very hard to stop such building around this site," said Dr. Khouli, adding: "People who come here to see ancient things have enough modern things at home." But new villas have already been rising along the Cairo to Saqqara route.

To be sure, many of the worries, complaints and tensions that a traveler finds in Cairo are not new. The perennial anxiety about worms in the cotton crop continues this summer, and a new generation of Western diplomats speaks in excited tones about an old problem: Egypt's massive debts.

President Sadat has lately been denouncing the excita-Libyan leader, Col.

While the austere regime of Gamal Abdel Nasser has passed, and prosperity has grown in the capital, he is not forgotten, as this picture in Cairo's railroad station attests.

"lunatic" - in rather the same way that President Nasser, a decade ago, denounced Jordan's stocky King Hussein as a "dwarf." Now as in the past Cairenes still make war on the flies, using the excellent locally made plastic swatters. And the press still complains about rats. The Cairo newspaper Al Ahram asserted last month that rats were swarming even in the control tower the Cairo airport Another perennial target of grumbling is the stately British Embassy here. A decade ago one newspaper com-plained that the V. R. on its gates stood for Viceroy and therefore constituted an affront to Egypt. Actually, they stand for Victoria Regina.

Last month. Al Ahram complained that the British Embassy's consular arm was being too snoopy about Egyptians seeking British visas. The paper huffed: "The British Embassy has forgotten that Egypt exchanges consular and diplomatic representation with Britain and not with Scotland Yard."

Fistfights for Bus Seats

Yet other pressures are new or mounting: In years gone by, jokers used to claim that wily Cairenes, encountering a naïve peasant on a city bus, would sit down and try to sell him the bus. But there is less room for cause Cairo's exotic collection of buses-from India, and points West-has become so crowded that fistfights break out over empty The new Mercedeses and other cars have clogged Cairo's avenues with un-precedented traffic jams, and pedestrians and drivers exchange insults that seem more heated than in years gone by. The sum total of grumpiness in the air is also increased by the relative freedom that President Sadat has given to the Cairo news-papers. This has led to an outpouring of criticism of some Government activities, although not of President Sadat himself.

The mass circulation Cairo newspaper Al Akhbar recently even denounced the venerable Ministry of Religious Endowments as having mis-spent its funds to "put up luxury buildings for summer vacationers."

Books on Jewish Affairs Another sign of the less re-pressive aura of the regime now than in years gone by is the fact that one Cairo bookstore, which formerly kept its books on Jewish af-

Muammar el-Qaddafi as a fairs cautiously out of sight, now has them openly on dis-

the bookstore's proprietor was in a complaining mood when an old customer came in last week. He gestured toward the street, which was crowded with new cars, modishly dressed Cairenes, and visiting Arabs from the Persian Gulf states. "It's like a carnival out there—but I can't afford it," he said ruefully.

Despite Government sub-sidies that hold down the prices of key commodities, Egypt has been hard hit by inflation. Estimates of the annual rate have been as high as 40 percent this year, and the cost of certain items, including some fairly routine works of art, have gone up much faster. Government-arranged pilgrimage to the sacred Islamic sites in Saudi Arabia this year had risen to almost $1,900 for first class and more than $1,600 second class. This is a painfully high sum, far larger than in past years and has already led to muted complaints. Soothing Statements

ernment makes confident and soothing statements that seem largely meant to as-suage anxiety and tensions within the society. Scattered wildcat strikes have been reported in recent months —although no receni instances of rioting in Cairo have come to light—and the police last week rounded up alleged members of an anti-Government Islamic group whose leader is said to have preached that Egypt's present society is godless and should be replaced by an Islamic theocratic state. Without referring directly to such dissidence, President

Sadat in a recent speech spoke glowingly of "modern Egypt, which is being built on science and faith." And on science and rath. And in another address last month he told his audience "I advise you to give up spite and make love prevail."

Yet even among Egyptians who have prospered considerably in recent years, a traveler encounters spiteful remarks and second thoughts about how things have turned out here.

When these Egyptians speak of the Government, they speak more frequently of alleged corruption than they did 10 years ago. And even when they speak of per-sonal things, they sometimes sound a negative note.
One scientist, having drawn on his substantial income to send two sons abroad for ad-vanced study, told an old acquaintance dolefully that they now seemed likely to spend their whole careers

"I have done the right thing for their professional life," he said. "But what have I done to my own family life?"

The United Mine Workers of America And The Law

When the law benefits the Mine Workers, they demand its protection.

The United Mine Workers of America marshalled the law and demanded its strict enforcement to:

- constitute itself a Union
- properly remove its former President from office
- properly convict the Yablonski assassins
- elect a new UMW President

W NEW YOR

BAN FEDER

- pass the new Federal Coal Mine Safety Act
- pass liberal Black Lung Benefits
- demand the new Pension Reform Act be enforced rigidly
- demand that Coal Companies bargain exclusively with the UMW and
- demand an entirely new labor contract from the Coal Companies. In 1974, the UMW bargained the richest package of wages and benefits in its history. (It has properly boasted of that contract, including its new Grievance Procedure, in all the Union journals.)

The Coal Companies get one commitment in return—that there will be no strikes; all unresolved disputes would be arbitrated. If that bargain were kept by the Mine Workers, courts would not be needed to deal with strikes over grievances.

When the law does not suit the Mine Workers, they scorn it.

How has the Union satisfied its no-strike requirement? During the 1974 contract:

There have been 4,355 illegal wildcat strikes.

The Nation has lost over 27,000,000 tons of coal.

Welfare Funds which finance miners' pensions and benefits have lost $43,000,000.

Miners have lost $141,000,000 in wages.

The Nation has lost badly needed energy.

- Mine workers struck against the State of West Virginia in 1974, when its Governor tried to allocate gasoline fairly during the oil embargo.
- Mine workers recently picketed a Subcommittee of the United States Senate, threatening another strike if a fatter Black Lung Bill was not passed.
- When the Cedar Coal Company sought court removal of illegal pickets last month, mine workers cried "Foul" and struck the entire industry to support its unlawful coercion of one employer.
- When two respected Federal Judges in Charleston upheld the no-strike requirement, mine workers demanded they be investigated for bribe-taking.

Spreading the Cedar strike was designed to intimidate Federal Judges from exercising their judicial function, and companies from seeking their right to relief in those courts.

If a large industrial corporation were to cut off half the Nation's energy supply, insult and ignore the Federal Court, lock out thousands of employees illegally, shut off their wages, and jeopardize their insurance and pensions, the outrage of Government and political leaders would be tumultuous. But when a big labor union fails utterly to prevent that very conduct, the country is without an effective remedy.

Surely the great majority of coal miners, who have testified in open court that they are ready and willing to work, could be given some basic personal security. Are gangs of pickets, some brandishing shotguns, roving across state lines beyond the reach of Federal and state police powers? Can a Union with so much political and economic influence be allowed to escape all accountability? Are Federal Judges in Southern West Virginia helpless against raw intimidation, and without recourse to Federal Marshals? Surely the Nation and the economy need not suffer these mindless losses year after year. Federal, State, and Congressional leaders have a clear responsibility to end coal field chaos.

Stever Is Confirmed as Head of Science Office and Ford Advise

By WALTER SULLIVAN

Dr. H. Guyford Stever, head of the National Science Foun-dation, was confirmed by the Senate yesterday as director of the new Office of Science and Technology Policy. In that role he will serve as science adviser to President Ford. The vote was 78 to 6, with 6 abstentions. The action marks the re-esablishment of a White House science advisory staff after its elimination by President Nixon more than three years ago. It is expected that Dr. Richard T. Atkinson, now deputy director of the science foundation, will act as the foundation's director until the end of the present administration in January. While the apparatus that Dr. Stever heads will be a descend-ant of that which existed in the White House before its dissolu-tion by President Nixon, it will such analyses can be performed to be performed to the Bentagon by the

Thousands Evacuated From Fire Is

By DAVID F. WHITE

BAY SHORE, L.I., Aug. 9-Thousands of residents of Fire Island, the barrier beach along the South Shore of Suffolk County, stepped off fer-ries today, carrying cats, dogs, habies and luggage and leaving the 35-mile-long is-land to hurricane Belle. James Borrelo, a pharmacist from Brooklyn, carried a new pair of $49 shoes. David Weiner, 13 from Toronto, brought his favorite pair of faded blue jeans. Some brought cameras, others carried television sets. Shirley Sampagna, whose father was the first Suffolk County bay constable, brought her golden retriever, Champagne, and closed down the house she was renting in constable, Kismet, on western Fire Island, when the knock on her came early morning.

"The Fire knocked on the door," Mrs. Sampagna said, "and told everybody to evacuate. There would be ferries waiting. They said take your valuables and side that will blow around into the house. They told us to take all stray dogs, cats and drunks who might wander onto the beach."

"I shut off the electricity, opened the windows about two inches so the pressure wouldn't knock them out and took in the furniture," Mrs. Sampagna, who still recalls the hurricane of '38, as the islanders still call it, which razed the entire community of Saltaire and left fewer than half a dozen houses standing in neighboring Fair Harbor.

Resignation Evident

Two communities to the east, in Fair Harbor, owners and renters resigned to nature's interruption of their vacations or extended weekends, brought in their deck furniture, boarded up their windows, secured their sailboats and hurriedly but calmly packed up their most prized possessions. Irwin Wexner, headmaster of the Adams School, who paid the last installment of his 10-year mortgage on his oceanfront house last night, took a philosophical attitude as he detached his toilets and put them in the living room to minimize the danger of flash floodings.

"I'm a fatalist, I just can't worry about the house," he said, as he prepared to board the ferry. "One thing I did was to put the Cheerios away. I don't like soggy His wife, Lilian, like many others, would have preferred to have stayed and watched the dramatic swath of storm cut across the ocean. "I would love to stay and see it and if I could have found three bridge players, I would Robert Rehbock, a personal manager for theatrical personalities, was equally nonchalant about his glassfronted modern house on the bay. "What will be will be. If there is disaster we'll simply rebuild."

Things Looked Calm Ruth Shaw said that she had tried to predict the effects of the storm by walking around her house sway-ing. "That way I could see what would fall down in the wind. We took the liquor down from the top shelves." The children, most of all, wanted to stay to watch. Jenny Korb, 14 years old, of Northport, L. I., thought it was "a pain in the neck to leave. It seems like it's not even happening, it's not even cold or rainy," she said, looking at the gray, but not threatening skies. Her friend, Kristi Beck, 12, of Bay Shore, said, "I wanted to stay for the excitement." Throughout the evacuation, rain just heavy enough to make one's sneakers soggy fell on the wharves and streets of Bay Shore There was almost no wind on the shore, although ferry captains had reported light gusts of five miles an hour on the bay itself. Although the official evacuation did not come until midmorning, the exodus began soon after residents awoke to the sound of a light rain and radio reports that

Soon little bands of people began the trudge to the ferry, often barefooted be-neath the rain-whipped skirts of their slickers as they pulled suitcases and small children in the wagons that serve as the Fire Island version of station wagons. By 9 A.M., the island was wide awake and hard at

New York City's Flood Control Command Group warned some 500,000 residents living in low-lying areas of the city to seek shelter on higher ground with relatives and friends. The agency said that even though the center of the storm was expected to strike central Long Island, city residents living within 500 feet of the city's water-front were in jeopardy of being flooded by torrential rains and extremely high tides.

In case of flooding, city residents were asked to call 966-7500, a central number for the Flood Control Command Group, which is made up of 10 city agencies. For other emergencies during the storm the numbers are 267-9800, another number for the Flood Control Command Group, and 911.

The National Weather Service urged all mobile-home residents in the region to seek shelter elsewhere. "These homes are vulnerable to high winds and storm tides," the Boat owners were urged to moor their craft securely, but the Weather Service noted late yesterday that it was probably too late for many people in areas where the seas aiready were rough.

Battery Equipment Should Be Checked

"If your home is on higher ground and is reasonably secure, plan to ride out the storm right there," the Weather Service advised, adding: "Get your battery-powered equipment in order as quickly as possible. Your transistor radio may become your only link to the world outside."

Residents of the storm area were told to fill their automobile fuel tanks because of the possibility that gas station pumps might be inoperable in the aftermath of the hurricane as a result of power failure or flooding.

The metropolitan area chapter of the American Red Cross prepared 37 emergency shelters throughout New York and northern New Jersey as temporary housing for those forced from their homes.

Schools, churches, community centers and fire stations in the Bronx, Queens, Brooklyn, Staten Island, Nassau and Suffolk Counties and in New Jersey were pressed into

The sandbags were to be available at the following precincts: the 45th in the Throgs Neck section of the Bronx, the 60th in Coney Island section of Brooklyn, the 100th in Far Rockaway, Queens, and the 122d on Staten Island.

The police said they would refer all persons stranded by the storm and in need of temporary shelter in the city's Department of Social Services. The telephone numbers of the emergency assistance unit of the Department of Social Services are 566-3109 and 344-5241-2-3-4-5.

Emergency operation centers also have been set up in Nassau and Suffolk Counties to handle emergencies caused by winds or flooding. In Nassau the number is (516) 535-4897 and in Suffolk, (516) 924-4400.

New Jersey emergency operations were being coordinated at the state's civil defense headquarters in Trenton but victims of the storm were being asked to contact

Some Flights Cancelled

As the evening wore on there were delays from flooding on the Long Island Expressway but no major interference with traffic flow.

In New Jersey, the Garden State Parkway, which usually is a scene of traffic jams on summer weekends, had heavy northbound traffic from shore areas. But a spokesman for the roadway authority said that vehicles were moving freely about 45 miles an hour.

Shortly after 10 P.M., the Federal Aviation Administration's traffic control center said that a few planes were still taking off from Newark, La Guardia and Kennedy In-ternational Airports but that even fewer were landing. Cancellation of flights by the air-

Storm Turns Tranquil Weather Office Into Madhouse amount of the South Shore of Long Island was going to

By JUDY KLEMESRUD National Weather Service Office, normally a tranquil place on the mezza-nine of 30 Rockefeller Plaza. was a madhouse yesterday as meteorologists plotted the path of Hurricane Belle, issued forecasts and evacuation requests, and tried to answer the hundreds of telephone calls that poured into their office.

"T've never had a day like this-at least not one where so many lives were threatened," said Harold M. Gib-son, the meteorologist in charge, who has been in weather work since 1946.

Mr. Gibson and the eight meteorologists on duty, stayed mainly in the forecast room, a futuristic looking place crammed with weather maps, charts and machines that spew out weather data from throughout the country. In an adjoining darkened room, the radar machine constantly monitored the storm, its red and green lights giving an eerie

"2001" feeling to the room.
The meteorologists studied three main sources of information in making their forecasts about the hurricane: radar reports, weather maps and weather satellite photographs. The photographs, taken every half hour, showed swirling patterns that even an untrained eye could tell was big trouble headed towards the metropolitan area.

Most Important Office "Right now, this is the most important office in the whole country," Mr. Gibson said, "and the most important peo-ple in the United States are working here today. It's a tremendous responsibility, but we enjoy it."

Mr Gibson, 49 years old, had arrived at his office about 4 P.M. Sunday from his home in Suffern, N.Y., and slept on a mattress there for three hours during the night. The mattress was directly beneath a water-color of a paim tree bending in a gale.

For the most part, the husky, silver-haired man was calm and collected, sipping from an ever-present can of Peosi Cola. But at one point. standing in front of the radar machine, he seemed near tears when he said: "I'm responsible for a tremendous number of lives. If we can get through this without the loss of life, then I'll be awfully happy." A few minutes later, when told that Civil Defense officials were not evacuating the South Shore of Long Island as fast as Mr. Gibson thought they should, he shouted an obscenity and began making telephone calls to the offi-

He was polite and lowkeyed on the phone, however, and after he had completed the calls he broke into a big grin. "I feel better now," he said. "They're doing a good job. All of Fire Island and the Barrier Beach has been evacuated. They put on extra ferry boats to do the job."

"Those were the people we were most worried about," he went on. "People on vacation don't listen to the radio. That is what terrified us so much. Direct contact is the only way you can let them know that they have to be evacuated."

His biggest worry, he said, was that a tremendous orologists typed out forecasts and weather advisories on two electronic typewriters that relayed the information to a computer in the National Weather Service's headquar-ters in Washington, D.C. In about five minutes, the same information was relayed back to the New York office and to National Weather Service offices around the nation on teletype machines. "Hurricane warning in effect," one of them said. "Heavy rains and thunderstorms this afternoon and early tonight, with street and urban flooding. Easterly winds possibly increasingly to 75 miles per hour or higher early tonight."

The view from the huge window of the forecast room is of 50th Street, between Fifth Avenue and Avenue of the Americas, and one meteorologist joked that the big window was there so the meteorologists could tell if the worst you get." Apparently most of his coworkers wanted to be a part of the occasion too, because Mr. Gibson kept ordering the jam-packed forecast room cleared of people "so we can do some work." Many of the additional people were reporters and television weather personnel who were doing broadcasts live from the forecast room. Normally there are only two people in here," said Mike Fayne, the chief assistant, as more than a dozen people were milling around looking at charts and satel-

She might have given some insight into the last days of the S.L.A., but after the state called its major witnesses, the defense, deciding that the prosecution had not proved its case, rested without calling a single witness. The jury learned from Mrs.

Harris that Miss Hearst was a young woman "going through a process of change," a "stage of learning about herself." It was only a chance decision "to go along for a ride" on the shopping trip that saved Miss Hearst from death with her comrades in the shootout the next day. # Jurors in the Harris Trial

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9-Following are capsule sum-maries of the jurors in the and Emily trial:

PATRICIA ANDERSON, black, in her late 20's or early 30's. Works for the Girl Scout Council and lives with her son. A college graduate. First time as a juror. Was vague on the details of the Patricia Hearst kidnapping, Miss Hearst's trial and the Symbionese Liberation Army. Did not know the verdict in the Hearst case.

JERRY J. WHOLEY, white, an aircraft mechanic for Flying Tiger Airlines. Lives with his wife and four children. two teen-agers and 9-year-old twins. A Navy veteran and a graduate of a technical college. His first time as a juror. Said he did not know much about the Harris-Hearst case, but approved of the food giveaway program Miss Hearst's father undertook to free his kidnapped daughter.

"It was given in a good cause, in a way," he said. REBECCA CAMARENA, a Mexican-American, is di-vorced and lives with her 12year-old son. Works for Secu-rity Pacific Bank. In her late 20's or early 30's and is a high school graduate. Asked if she had ever seen Emily and William before, she re-plied, "I saw you in the post office. It said 'wanted.'"

BILLIE FROST, white, a psychiatric technician at a state hospital. Said she pre-ferred that the Harrises stand for the daily flag ceremony. Said she had read that Miss Hearst had been "tortured" by her kidnappers and kept in a closet. Her husband is a retired Navy officer.

JONATHAN BERES, white, 25 years old. A student at Los Angeles Valley College, majoring in psychology. Lives with his mother, has two older sisters. Does not read newspapers, except the sports pages. Recalled that "Cinque" (Donald DeFreeze) was the leader of the Symbionese Liberation Army, and linked the S.L.A. to the Hearst kidnapping. Said he thought the Harrises were members of the S.L.A.

RONALD F. PRUYN, white. administrative officer for Occidental Insurance Company. A college graduate and former Air Force staff sergeant. Had encyclopedic knowledge of the Hearst case. Said he thought the S.L.A. was involved in a Sacramento bank robbery, in which a woman was killed. Throughout the trial his wife excised stories the newspaper. Mr. from Pruyn was the juror accused by two former prospects of prejudging the case before being sworn in to serve.

KAREN TURTLE, white, the jury foreman, a student at a Gemological Institute. Married to a lawyer in the music industry. Mrs. Turtle, in her mid-20's, said she had not followed the Hearst trial. It got so sensational after a while. I got turned off, much like the Watergate thing," she said.

THERESA CAPEHART,

white, mid-20's. A data tran-scriber at a Veterans Administration hospital. Attended junior college. Her husband is a Vietnam Navy combat veteran. Said she does not read newspapers, but did link Patricia Hearst with the S.L.A. Said she did not know what the initials S.L.A. stood for.

RICHARD L. ADDISON, black, a medical technologist at the University of California, Los Angeles, Medical Center, Mid-30's, A graduate of Louisiana State University. Belongs to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Knew the basic outline of the S.L.A. philosophy. Said that in his line of work "I have to separate my notions from the DAISY VALLEY, black, a housewife, and grandmother. A former secretary to a school superintendent. Her husband is a retired letter carrier. She remembers the shoot-out in which six S.L.A. members were killed because it happened on May 17, 1974, her birthday. Did not know the verdict in the Hearst trial and had little recollec-tion of the sporting goods store incident.

PAMELA CUMMINGS, white, mid-30's, a staff research associate in physiology at U.C.L.A. Is divorced and lives with an 8-year-old son. Has a B.S. degree and in jury selection asked to be called "Ms." Asked her primary source of new she said: "I read books." She knew the S.L.A. had kidnapped Miss Hearst, but did not know the outcome of Miss Hearst's

GEORGE F. FIELDS, white, late 50's or early 60's, a letter carrier for II years. On his route, he likes to read the front page of the Wall Street Journal. # A Legion Post Answers Questions on 'the Illness'

By REGINALD STUART Special to The New York Times

MCKEESPORT, Pa., Aug. 9 The Burt Foster American Legion Post 361 used to be a favorite gathering place for many legionnaires in this southeast Allegheny County city of about 35,000 people. But in recent weeks, since "the illness" struck in this e based his state, many legionnaires have t that there stayed away and business in the dark and dingy barroom has been bad.

"At the bar, business was off $400 last week; people aren't coming in," said Joe Heatherington, chairman of the board of trustees of Post

Tonight, Mr. Heatherington and 21 other post members most of them expressing cautious calm over "the illness," as they call it, filed into the small post headquarters for something more than a drink. THE WORLD'S GREATEST

Head of State Arts Council Resigns "The improvements made in my tenure," Mrs. Davidson

By WOLFGANG SAXON Less than a week after declaring that she would "absolutely not" resign as chairman of the State Council on the Arts. Joan K. Davidson left the post yesterday, saying that she did so at the request of Governor Carey.

Mrs. Davidson accused the Carey administration of "indifference to the arts" and implied that it was seeking "bold headlines and dazzling events," rather than solid 'achievement

At the same time, Mrs. Davidson said she was also giving up her seat on the council. She cited no specific reason for her action, but arts groups around the state have been complaining of delays in the disbursement of state aid and some former members of the council's staff have described the operations of the council as

The office of Governor
Carey acknowledged Mrs.
Davidson's announcement with a "no comment" last evening, saying a statement would be forthcoming at the "appropriate time." Reminded that Mrs. Davidson had said she quit because Mr. Carey had "asked" her to do so, a spokesman for the Governor said, "So she says."

Comment Withheld

Another no comment came from Kitty Carlisle, the actress and singer, who is vice chairman of the council and has been mentioned as a possible successor to Mrs Davidson, Miss Carlisle said she would refrain from making any statements until Governor Carey made his.

In her statement last evening Mrs. Davidson said: "I leave with regret the wonderful Arts Council staff, the arts constituency and the work. Despite the serious problem of cutbacks in grant money cutting of administrative staff and indifference to the arts on the part of this administration, I believe that important progress has been made during my year as

When the state ordered various departments and agencies to trim their budgets in view of the continuing budget difficulties, the council was reduced to about $27.3 million for the current fiscal year, down from $35 million received in the previous year. Critics noted that none of the funds allocated for this year had reached the many arts groups for which they were destined. Mrs. Davidson's assistant, Patricia Falk, conceded last week that the council had been slow in processing applications, but said this was the result of such difficulties as a move of its offices to new quarters downtown and reductions in staff because of budget cuts. Miss Falk said the 16-yearold agency had only 68 em-ployees to deal with the ap-plication, compared with 86 reacted strongly to the reports of her impending ouster. She said she was "absolutely not" going to resign and had "big plans for next year that are already in the works." In addition to the staff dismissals in the general budget squeeze, the council has also lost a number of people who resigned in the last few months. Those who left the staff included some personnel in what were deemed key positions, such as officers for performing arts, administra-tion and fiscal management. A number of these former employees charged that there was "confusion" in the administration of the agency.

Delays in financing work

special hardships on smaller cultural groups with no other substantial sources of income. Such groups often use a letter from the council with a promise of financial support as collateral of a sort to obtain bank loans that keep them afloat.

According to Miss Falk let-ters went out to applicants recently explaining to them that procedures were slow this year because of the council's various difficulties.

Ironically, Mrs. Davidson last October said that her produest achievement in less than six months as chairman was the promptness with which the council last year was disbursing what was than a record allocation.

A vice president of the J. M. Kaplan Fund Inc. and long active in community and urban - environmental affairs, Mrs. Davidson was named to the council's unsalaried chair-manship by Governor Carey in March 1975.

She had also been an unsuccessful Democratic cand-date for the State Senate, and the appointment led Albany Republicans to voice fears that the Arts Council was falling victim to "polit-ical pressure" and "politici-zation." The Senate Finance Committee went as far as calling a hearing in May, during which Mrs. Davidson promised that he would never tolerate such pressure on the

French Music Festival Seeks Informality By FLORA LEWIS

Special to The New York Times VENCE, France-The truck pulled into the tiny Place Godeau in the middle of the sonata, and the young men jumped out. Some of them began stringing long wires and installing microphones and loudspeakers, while oth-ers passed around a handbill advertising "Operation Rhino, an itinerant summer festival of improvised music" to take place at 11 P.M. in front of the town hall.

When Ivry Gitlis, director of the Vence Festival, put away the violin he had been playing to the accompani-ment of Daniel Weyenberg on a Steinway, incongruously installed in a nook of the square under the old church tower, someone showed him the handbill.

He was furious. There was an argument, harsh at first and then more accommodating as he explained that the unexpected visiting musicians might be excellent but couldn't interfere with his festival unless he heard them first, and his festival was going to be playing in front of the town half too

Finally, an agreement was reached that the newcomers would install themselves a few blocks away.

"Everybody wants to make music," Mr. Gitlis said with a sigh. "There'll be three, four, five different sets of people around tonight."

The Last Night It was the last night of Vence's official two-week summer festival, which Mr. Gitlis has been running for the last five years, and was likely to go on until dawn, with people wandering around playing chamber music wherever there was a place for musicians to sit and that has a square and a tree has a festival nowadays," said Anne Chaputot, public relations director for the Vence fortnight, and she was right. There are some 200 officially recognized by the Ministry of Tourism, and many more spontaneous or runaway "festivals" like that of the "Rhino" group, which was missing one trumpet, one trombone, one clarinetflute, and one percussion player, but was determined to go ahead with saxophones,

It is a kind of mini-Woodstock of classical music that the Israeli-born violinist has established in this pretty little village above the Riviera, so beloved of Matisse that he designed and decorated a superb chapel for the local

Mr. Gitlis started by inviting musician friends to come and play. Since he knows some famous ones, at one point or another the festival has presented the conductors Zubin Mehta and L. Id. Stokowski, Leo Ferre, and even Dizzy Gillespie and Marcel Marceau, the mime. The particularity of the Vence Festival is that in addition to giving regular concerts, the musicians stay on and play as long as people want to listen, turning up at impromptu morning sessions for children or on the street in the afternoon.

The informality is somewhat like that of Tanglewood, itself startling in France, but it is less organized. ized, less predictable and more emotional

Mr. Gitlis tells rambling, sometimes limp little stories to the audience while the musicians rest between offerings and wheedles performers, whom he invariably introduces only by their first names, to play something more. And the people sit and

There's a communication," he said. 'The performers are public artists and the audience is an artist public. People who've never heard a concert before wander in and then keep coming back every night. We're preserving something. Artists have a terrible responsibility. People who and feel have got to keep it going to get us through the next 20 or 30

"It's kind of family," said Miss Chaputot. "The audience feels that the musicians are playing for themselves and enjoying themselves." "Yes," said Mr. Gitlis. "Egotism, realistic egotism. You can't lie to an audience. They can tell when you're doing it for obligation or for love." Mr. Gitlis was sad. He wasn't sure if the Vence Festival could be held again a sixth year, but he said that if it wasn't in Vence, he'd find somewhere else.

Despite the director's efforts to establish an intimacy between the musicians and the audience, the town provided only a parking lot for the festivals.

There was no doubt. The summer festival has become a compulsion. It is a question whether the musicians attract the audience or the audience attracts the musicians. But when the warm weather comes and the people leave their homes and television sets for the French countryside nowadays, they are likely to find a festival and probably musicians on the street.

E PER MY

ROLL 'EM It's pleasure before business today for the Retreads, a 17-piece stage band made up of working executives from the midtown area whose specialty is re-creating the big band sound of the Miller, Goodman and Dorsey era. The instrumentalists will be sounding off this afternoon from 5 to 6 P.M. in the summer musical series at Rockefeller Center, held in the lower plaza just off Fifth Avenue between 49th and 50th Street. This is the group's second appearance at the Center, following a successful concert there last summer. In case of inclement sweather, the event will be HOLDING OUR OWN The acclaimed mineral and gem display at the American Museum of Natural History continues to draw crowds, but a nearby exhibit in the secondfloor Akeley Gallery also warrants inspection for imaginative framing of a less than glittery subject. This is "Recycling America's Re-sources," which uses audiovisuals, graphics and threedimensional displays to stress diminishing supplies of min-compounded by problems of waste management, in a historical panorama from Co-lonial times to the present.

The purposeful display. sponsored by the National Association of Recycling Industries, is aimed primarily at young people but by no means limited in eye-catching appeal and even entertainment. One section features a vintage Laurel & Hardy comedy on a demolished car that blends into documentary footage of a modern shredding process for autos. A transparent telephone shows yards of copper wire, brass bells and other metal components inside

John Tratola (Barbarino of television's "Welcome Back, Kotter") appears on a record album cover that has been recycled. In the textile products section, the new $2 bill gleams brightly in a giant bubble containing floor covering, clothing and rag dolls converted from old textile wastes. The Museum is open daily from 10 A.M. to 4:45 P.M. except on Sunday and holidays when it is open from II AM to 5 P.M.

TERRA FIRMA The music of émigré American composers is the theme of tonight's free concert in the Bicentennial Music Festival in Washington Square Park, with Arthur Weisberg conducting. The event will also mark the first collaboration between Mr. Weisberg and his brother. Jack, who is in charge of the elaborate sound support system which has become such an important element in Festival productions.

That most American of tyles, jazz, is markedly resent in the three works styles, scheduled for the program, written by three major composers who came here from Europe before World War II. The selections are Igor Stravinsky's "L'Histoire du Soldat," Darius Milhaud's "Creation of the World" and Kurt Weill's "Suite from the Threepenny Opera."

In case of rain, the concert will be heard in the Eisner and Lubin Auditorium of New York University's Loeb Student Center, 566 LaGuardia Place. The program starts at 8 P.M. Daniel Waitzman and Andrew Bolotowsky will per-form a program of flute duets and solos by Telemann, Bach, Debussy and Hotteterre tomorrow at 12:30 P.M. in the free, midday series of recitals at the downtown branch of the Whitney Museum, 55 Water

Making "The Devil and the Deep" (1932) was not a happy experience or a comfortable Hollywood debut for Charles Laughton according to the new biography by Charles Higham. Yet the British actor appeared in four additional films in California (they made them fast) before going home the next year for "The Private Life of Henry VIII," which brought him an Oscar, world prestige is interesting now mainly for Mr. Laughton's simmering portrait of a submarine commander insanely jealous of his wife, played by Tal-lulah Bankhead. Gary Cooper completes the triangle. The movie is tomorrow's feature at 8 P.M. at the Undercroft Coffeehouse of Christ and St. Stephen's Church, 120 West 69th Street (between Broadway and Columbus Avenue). Admission is $1.50 and 75 cents for the elderly. Popcorn is free.

"My view of Ellington is more old-fashioned, more tra-ditional," he said with a laugh in a telephone interview. "The theme of the fes-tival has become "Ellington, past, present and future.

Past Represented

The past, he said, will be represented in the way he and older choreographers responded to Mr. Ellington's music. The earliest piece will be the 1952 "Liberian Suite," which was originally chore-ographed (it is now a revised version by James Truitte) by the late Lester Horton, Mr. Ailey's teacher, it was Mr. Horton who introduced Duke Ellington to Mr. Ailey, when the composer dropped by Mr. Horton's Los Angeles studio in the 1950's. After the New York City Ballet's Stravinsky festival in 1972, Mr. Ailey told Mr. Ellington that he would like to honor him in a similar way.

"I decided," he recalled, that I said let's start celebrating people while they're still alive." Mr. Ellington re-acted wryly by telling Mr. Ailey, "I don't know if I want

Problems involving schedules and financing did not make the festival possible until this year, but Mr. Ailey was still determined to see the Ellington tribute take place after the composer's death as his Bicentennial of-fering. "Duke liked to have his music danced." Mr. Ailey writes in the festival's program. . . And I want to say something about this great man who through his music, through his personality and through his love of humanity, healed some of the wounds of this century."

nicely named Burning Spear, which made its American debut in Chicago on Aug. 2 and showed up Sunday night at the Rochdale Community Auditorium in Jamaica, Queens, for its first New York-area performance. The group will also play Friday at the Schaefer Festival in Central Park and Monday at My Father's Place, the Roslyn.

The Rochdale Village hall, a theater set in the middle of a gigantic housing develop-ment, is hardly an ideal facility, in terms of acoustics, sightliness or general atmosphere. Furthermore, Sunday's concert was lackadaisically organized — it wandered on for more than four hours past its scheduled starting time, even though Burning Spear, the headliners, played for only 50 minutes. In addition, the sound system and the lighting failed to make the best possible case for the Rupert Willington and Delroy Hines are the backup singers, and the instrumental accompaniment is provided by a seven-man ensemble called the Black Disciples.

Mr. Rodney's singing voice is a husky low tenor that he sustains with greater energy than most of the other reggae singers, who tend to deal in shorter, more expostulatory accents or oldfashioned talking. The Black Disciples, who

Royals Crush Yanks; Holtzman Is Battered

Special to The New York Times

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 9—The Yankees met the Kansas City Royals tonight in the first game of a three-game series that some people viewed as a preview of the American League's post-season playoffs. If the Yankees continue their first real skid of the seasons, the preview might be as close as they get to the playoffs. The Royals, the Western Division leaders, whipped the Yankees, 8-2, as Dennis Leonard gained his 14th victory against 4 defeats. The loss, the Yankees' 11th in the last 15 games, sliced their East-ern Division lead to 81/2 games, the smallest it has been in a month.

Kansas City has won seven of the 10 games the teams have played this season. The latest victory came before a crowd of 40,435, largest ever to see a baseball game in Kansas City. Ken Holtzman was the starting pitcher for the Yanstarting pitcher for the Roy-als. A few days before the hander in a 10-player trade with Baltimore, the Royals sought him only if he agreed to contract terms first.

Holtzman, however, wanted a guaranteed, no-trade contract and the Royals wouldn't give it to him. So he stayed with the Orioles and then joined the Yankees who eventually gave him a contract he liked. The Yankees, on the other hand, couldn't have liked his pitching tonight. The Roy-als battered Holtzman from the game in the fourth inning after scoring eight runs against him on nine hits including home runs by Hal McRae and Amos Otis.

Holtzman's performance was not unlike a number of recent outings. He won his last start with a next 12-hitter, but prior to that, he was knocked around in three straight starts, including the one in Chicago when innings, he has allowed 24 earned runs and 43 hits.

The Royals, who entered the game with a 10-game lead in their division, jumped on Holtzman immediately

Jim Wohlford led off the first inning with a single and Otis doubled him home after he went to second on a wild pitch. George Brett, the league's No. 2 hitter with a .349 average grounded out, but McRae, the league's No-I hitter with a .354 scored his seventh home run for a 3-0 lead.

Holtzman, who reportedly signed a five-year contract for $750,000, retired the next two batters in the first inning and escaped the second without allowing a baserun-ner. But Otis his his 13th homer in the third and in the fourth—don't even mention the fourth.

The lead-off batter in the fourth was John Mayberry, the Royals' feared left-handed slugger against whom the Yankees use an exaggerated shift, Graig Nettles,

Did Somebody Say Crucial Series?

It couldn't have happened at a better time. The Yan-kees lose again to the Orioles, see their lead slashed to below 10 games—and fire off a petulant telegram to the American League president complaining about certain umpires being assigned to "such a crucial series."

Crucial series? It almost seems like a normal August As any baseball fan worth his bubblegum knows, August means pennant races. This is the time of year when pitchers should be reaching back for that little extra something, when one crucial series should be following another, a time for baseball heroes to stand up and be counted. Since 1969, when the majors divided their two leagues into four divisions to avoid boring runaways and double the fun, it has usually worked out that way. Few summers have passed without at least one or two good pennant races. But four times nothing equals nothing, and that's what has been worrying baseball executives this summer. With the Yankees, Reds, Royals and Phillies rolling like Jimmy Carter, beach-going fans have been paying more attention to bikinis than to the latest baseball chatter pouring from the nearest portable radio.

But the yawns were interrupted Sunday, at least momentarily, when the Orioles socked it to the Yankses for the sixth time in a row. "We've always felt we could catch them," bellowed Manager Earl Weaver of Baltimore. "We're putting it all together now." Elsewhere around the circuit in other Mudvilles where joy appeared to have vanished, raint stirrings of optimism can also be detected. Spokesmen for outdistanced contenders are talking about the "flicker of hope" that never dies; or about previous collapses of teams with big leads, or about how "we're going to be playing people head-on for the rest of the season." While pro football has muscled its way into the sports scene, a third of the

baseball season remains. Large Numbers, Small Hopes

So much for the wishful thinking. A look at the standings on the second Monday of August hardly supported the optimism. The Phillies led by 14 games, the Reds by 13, the Royals by 10 and the Yankees, even after their latest back-flip, by 9. On the second Monday of August last year, the standings showed the Pirates in front by two, the Athletics by 51/2, the Red Sex by 7 and

"We're concerned about the lack of good pennant races," a spokesman for the major league office concedes. "It could hurt us in September, after the kids go back son's comparable period by more than 1½ million. Seven franchises show a gain of more than 200,000, and four others are ahead by more than 100,000. In all, 14 of the 24 clubs are doing better at the gate this year than last. Barring any late pennant surges, that's the real miracle of this year's baseball season. New owners (such as Ted Turner in Atlanta and Bill Veeck in Chicago), new division leaders (Yankaes, Phillies, Royals), new personalities (such as Mark Fidrych of the Tigers) and new interest generated by last year's dramatic World Series, are among the reasons cited by baseball men for the prosperity. But don't underestimate the power of zany management or sure-fire giveaways. "Baseball itself is not enough," says Veeck, back on the scene after an absence of 15 years. "It's got to be fun even when the home team loses. It's got to be wrapped up like a Christmas package."

Losers Draw on Imagination

Veeck sent his club onto the field last Sunday in short-shorts, and hoped the new outdoor shower in the bleachers would make sunbathers forget the White Sox trailed by 19 games. So far, attendance is up 200,000 over last year. In Atlanta, where the Braves were 22 games out of first place at last count, fans come out to the park for ostrich races, home-plate weddings and fireworks displays. And in New York, a member of the Met promotion staff talked urgently the other day of strategy for this year's stretch battle.

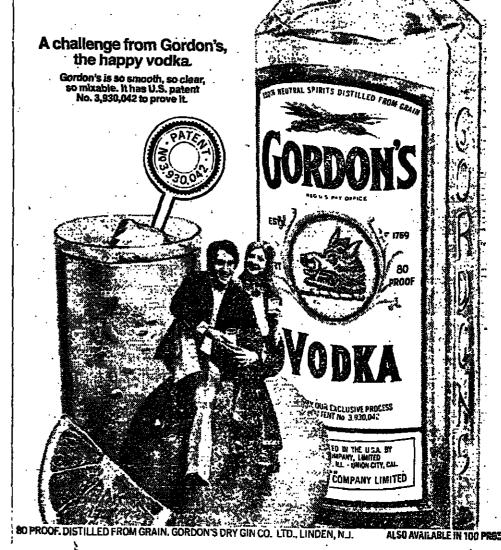

"We may throw in another day," the Met drum-beater said. "Maybe a Back-to-School Day around the first week of September. The thing is, you dont want to put your days too close together."

A week ago yesterday, Jacket Night drew 53,523 paying customers to Shea Stadium for a game with the Montreal Expos. The 30,000 jackets given out to patrons under the age of 15 cost less than $1 each. Right now, the Mets are pushing Camera Day on Thursday, when the players will pose for pictures instead of taking batting practice. Other promotional biggies, just to name a few, include Helmet Day, Medalion Day, Family Day, Photo Album Day, Banner Day and Appreciation Day.

Promotions like these, along with reasonable ticket prices (industrywide average for general admission: $2), have helped baseball hold its fans. But what about September? Even the zaniest of the promoters readily admit that baseball's best promotion is a red-hot pennant race. That's why a silent cheer went up on Sunday when the Yankees talked of a crucial series and Weaver said defiantly. We've always felt we could catch them.'

cents at Dina's Coffee Shop It is now a neighborhood of high crime and low business. The Jerome Cafeteria, across River Avenue from the Stadium for 40 years, 3 now a Nedick's. A plaque inside the door reads like a gravestone, "The Jerome Cafeteria, a Bronx landmark for 40 years, 1936-1976."

Inside the stadium, the workers had put up one of the yellow goalposts bor-rowed for last night's sched-uled game by the Jets from Shea Stadium. They got up the one in left field, but they were having trouble with the one in front of the Yankee dugout. The one-legged support did not fit into the eight-inch galvanized steel pipe that acts as a "sleeve" in the ground. It took a while for the workers to dig out what was blocking the post. It was several sheets of paper, stapled together and rolled up — "Goal Post Installation Instructions."

Across River Avenue, only two of the 50 bowling alleys in Stadium Lanes are being used. "What has the new Yankee Stadium done for my husiness?" asked Al Weiskopf. "It's destroyed us."

"It hasn't helped one jota." says Jerry Rosenfeld of the Vines Mens Shop on 161st Street and Gerard Avenue. "Since the Yankees are back" I think I've sold two black neckties to a couple of stadium workers."

"People don't come here to shop." says Vance Warren. 'They come to see a ball game. I didn't go to Eb-. bets Field to shop in the old days. I went to see the

The souvenir stands, fastfood shops and bars are the only businesses that seem to be doing better because of the Yankees' return. Tommy Deplas of Dina's Coffee Shop says he takes in about $100 a day more when the Yanks are playing at home.

But the neighborhood had hoped that the new stadium would mean that the city would help improve the area. They are bitterly disap-

"All you've got to do is look and see," says Warren.
"Where is it? Where is a hundred million dollars? "They painted that pole," he says, pointing to a lamp post outside his store. "And they put in big signs on the subway saying which way is Yankee Stadium. A hundred million dollars."

No one is arguing that the stadium should be torn down. But many feel the city should spend more money on the neighborhood and not just its only remaining landmark.

The neighborhood is eminently savable," argues Myles

Jackson, a Gerard Avenue resident who is chairman of the Macombs Field Program. There are lots of fine apartment buildings, but time is running out." Jackson's pet project would be to convert Macombs Dam

Park, across 161st Street the stadium, from a poorly kept public park into a well-kept public athletic complex with an artificial-turf football field and allweather quarter-mile track that could be operated 24 hours a day.

"It's the kind of project that could show how the inner cities of this country could be saved," says Jackson, "and it could be built for $3 million. Had they in-corporated that idea into the financing for the new stadium, it would have cost next to nothing compared with the $100 million.

Bernie Harris, owner of the Graded A Beef Company butcher shop on Gerard Avenue and president of the Stadium Area Merchants, Civic and Professionals Association Inc., also thinks the neighborhood can be saved. "I have great faith in the area," Harris says. "In fact, I just purchased this build-"You know what the stadium is?" says Jackson. "It's an enclave of white, middleclass suburbia. But I hope it's changing. I think the Yankees themselves are getting more involved. At least, I hope they are. George Steinbrenner has promised us some support with the Macombs project, and there are a lot of people around who are working hard for the neighborhood." Many of the storefronts have changed over the years, reflecting the neighborhood's change. The Roxy Delicatessen is gone, but there is a Jamaican Reggae record shop. And still there is the Stadium Bar on 161st Street, where Angelo Porco remembers the "old days" when he and his father once hedged a bet on the football Giants making the playoffs. "My father and I bet against them because we knew if they won, the bar would take in extra money and if they lost, we'd at least win the bet." he says.

Porco sighs and talks about the days when Jim Patton and Jerry Hillebrand and other Giants would come in for a few at the bar. He knows the return of the Yankees won't bring back the Jerome Cafeteria or the 15cent egg cream.

"But when they're not here," he says, "it's just the same declining neighborhood. When the teams are here, it seems better. You know, there are more people around. People make neighborhoods."

Stones, Walker Win in Sweden

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 9 (AP) — John Walker of New Zealand missed his world mile record by 3.67 seconds and Dwight Stones of the United States defeated the Olympic gold medalist, Jacek Wszola of Poland, in the high jump tonight at an international track meet here.

Walker, the Olympic 1,500meter champion, lunged past Thoma Wessinghage of West Germany at the finish to win the mile in 3 minutes 53.07 seconds.

Wessinghage, who sur-prised the New Zealander with a strong kick in the final stretch, was only threehundredths of a second behind in 3:53.10 for a European record.

Walker set his world record of 3:49.4 a year ago in Goteborg, Sweden. Stones cleared 7 feet 51/2 inches, well off his world mark of 7-7½, which he set last Wednesday in Philadel-phia. Stones finished third in the rain at the Olympics. Wszola was second at 7-41/2 and Mike Winson of the Unit-ed States was third, also at 7-4½.

Other American winners included the Olympic long jump champion, Arnie Rob-inson, and Jim Bolding in the 400-meter hurdles.

played 18." Almost one-fourth of the Jets were hurt seriously enough not to be available if there had been a game last night. The delay will not enable most of them to be ready for the Giants.

As soon as the Giants discovered the game was put off, a few minutes before they were to have their pregame meal, Coach Bill Arnsparger brought them into the field house for a meeting and then scheduled a light practice.

"I wish I could have been smart enough to be a mind-reader," said Holtz. "Then I wouldn't have given the boys this morning off. We would have worked out."

The teams will undoubtedly ease up on workouts the rest of this week because of theu jammed-up schedules. Friday afternoon, the Giants take a three-hour flight to Houston, so they do not, strictly speaking, have a day off. "What you'll probably see

Eagles, 14 to 7 PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9 (AP)-A pair of rookie running backs. Jack Deloplaine and Tommy Reamon, led a 72-yard, fourth-period touchdown drive that carried the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 14-7 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles tonight. The National Football League exhibition game was played before 16,-823 in a driving rain and strong wind from Hurricane

The Steelers started the winning nine-play drive from their 28-yard line late in the third period. Deloplaine and Reamon alternated carries all the way until Deloplaine slashed over from the 2.

for a half in one game, and then a half the next game," said Ward. "So it won't really be that bad. The players will wind up playing one game by the weekend. The hig thing is, we get a chance to look at people. Even though we don't practice too much, we still see the players in a game. And that's why it's important to play." But Jet-Giant games are not quite in the realm of other preseason affairs. They play, as coaches like to describe it, "with enthusiasm."

"Any time you play a game," explains Arnsparger, you must be enthusiastic. don't care if it's playing Monopoly with the kids. Every time there is a winner and a loser you have to think about winning." There remains a danger of overenthusiastic football players tearing up a field that will have one soccer game and two football games, after being first drenched by storms, within a few days. The stadium manager, Patrick Kelly, said the was "pretty well knit." He added, though, that "the outfield is under water. The Yankees, who are in Kansas City and Minnesota this week, return home next Monday.

Special to The New York Times SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 9 -Teams headed by George Rapee of New York and Dr. George Rosenkranz of Mexico City battled in the final of the Spingold knockout teams championship here this afternoon, and early exchanges were about even.

After 32 deals, Rapee led by the slender margin of seven international match

Rapee, a great veteran who won three world titles in the 1950's and his first national title exactly 40 years ago, heads a group that has plenty of talent but lacks practiced partnerships. He plays with John Solodar, a young New York expert, and Dave Berkowitz of New York, and Jim Jacoby of Dallas. The third partnership comprises Mark Blumenthal of Schaumberg, Ill., and Mike Lawrence of Berkeley, Calif.

although West would have regretted this selection if South had held the jack of which won the Vanderbilt championship earlier this year and is attempting to complete a rare double, is handicapped by the absence of one of its key players. Dr. Richard Katz of Los Angeles, that suit instead of the ten. Two balanced hands totaling 30 high-card points do not normally provide a sound play for six no-trump, and Solodar was not thrilled with who normally plays through-out each match with Larry his prospects when the dum-my appeared. However, there Cohen, also of Los Angeles, had to return home to conduct an emergency operation, were some useful intermediate cards, and the opposing lay-out was such that there was but planned to return to play tonight. The other members of the team are John Mohan of Los Angeles and Roger more than one way to make the slam. If he had played low from dummy, East would have won the jack, but 12 tricks would probably have Bates of Las Vegas, Nev. In the semifinal stage yes-terday, the Rosenkranz team was in devastating form in the afternoon, and built up a lead of 72 points. They held come home, thanks to the even break in clubs and winning finesses in the other on to win by 86 points, in spite of the absence of Dr. However, South reasoned that West would not lead

Katz, against a tired Precision foursome. Kathie Wei of New York; Gerald Caravelli of Des Plaines, Ill., Ron Andersen of Wheaton, Ill., and Hugh MacLean of Minneapolis had survived a series of desperately close matches to reach the semifinal stage. The other semifinal was a ding-dong battle. Rapee's team led by 35 points at the halfway mark, but their opponents then struck back. Peter Pender of San Francisco, Harlow Lewis of Wynnewood, Pa.: and Eric Kokish and Peter Nagy of Montreal picked up 46 points in the third quarter to lead by II into the final 16. But the Rapee team was irresistible in the stretch and won by 17 points.

In the first quarter Rapee and Solodar brought home a couple of shaky slams, one of which is shown in the diagram. Rapee opened a bor-derline hand, and his partner was also on the aggressive side when he eventually bid six no-trump. Note that most experts do not regard North's two-spade bid as a strengthshowing reverse after the ly one diamond-two club

Progress of Ministers Chess:

BY ROBERT BYRNE Special to The New York To MALAGA, Spain, Aug. 8-The irregular progress of Mikhail Tal of the Soviet Union through the Interzonal

sults. After throwing away his won game with Vasily Smyslev, also of the Soviet Union, in the third round. Tal made one listless draw on top of another, and up to the eighth round he had failed to score a single vic-

Tournament in Biel, Switzerland, shows most clearly how morale affects a player's re-tory.

Then Robert Heubner of West Germany came at him overeagerly, making it too easy for Tal to turn back the attack and take a point. Still, that looked more like an isolated misfortune for the high riding Huebner, rather than the beginning of a surge for Tal. When Tal took only one more point in the next four rounds it came against the inexperienced Joaquin Diaz of Cuba—the teaders could hardly take the former world champion as a serious contender.

But that was a terrible mistake. Hoping to hit a man hard who was not going any where I ambitiously snatche a piece from him in the 13th round, thinking to squash his mating attack by a countersacrifice: The trouble was that it did not succeed.

What that did for Tal was worth far more than a single point, for the exhilarating feeling that he could succeed with his old aggressive style carried over to the next round, when he went for Lajos Portisch of Hungary with his confidence restored. After winning this second key game, Tal was not to be stopped. He achieved a sec-ond-place tie with Portisch and Tigre Petrosian, also of the Soviet Union, a halfpoint behind Bent Larsen. Tal, in the face of a fine counterattack by Portisch, gambled with a less than perfect sacrifice and scored when the correct defense was misser.

THE ENGLISH PUB. By Michael Jackson, 170 pages, Illustrated Harper & Row, $15.

'An endless pub-crawl would afford the best lesson in England's heritage and history. What other country has painted its story in the streets, hung the pictures at every corner, avery roadside and village. like a continuous tapestry, and captioned them with wit, rhyme and comment? From the ubiquitous 'Green Man' (pre-Christian) to the unique 'Dog and Trumpet' (1970's), England's every square mile is a vast openair museum, detailing its own geography. topography, military history, heraldry; its personalities, birds and beasts, occupations and sports."

While Michael Jackson, author of "The English Pub," sounds in these remarks as if he had just enjoyed several of "the best" in his favorite local, he does succeed in making the pub seem a cornerstone in the English social structure. As he says, "The pub is an institution unique to England, and there is nothing more English." Samuel Johnson went even further in his famous remark: "No sir, there is nothing which has yet been contrived by man, by which so much happiness is produced as by a good tayern or inn." Speaking of village pubs or inns, Hilaire Belloc said: "When you have lost your inns, drown your empty. selves, for you will have lost the last of

Equivalent of Village

Just as the pub is the center of village life, it creates the equivalent of the village -a neighborhood feeling-in the city. It is a place where people enjoy a common atmosphere and common activities, an increasingly rare social phenomenon in the United States. In a pub, a person can enjoy anything from peripheral companionship a comforting feeling of sharing the human lot-to whatever degree of intimacy his inclination and ingenuity can achieve.

One of the greatest advantages of a pub was pointed out by Dr. Johnson in the sequel to his often-quoted sentence. Here, one is on neutral ground: no one is either guest or host, in the sense of social obligation. No solicitude is required; the sociability can be spontaneous. You can eat or drink and run, you can stay as long as you like. At its very least, the pub is a cell padded with people.

It is worth reading the least of Charles Dickens's novels to hear him describe a pub or inn. While pubs did not figure as prominently in Thomas Hardy's novels, he did some of his writing in one, and an ale named after him was listed by the "Guinness Book of Records" as the world's strongest beer. English ale on beer-the words are now used almost interchangeably, according to Mr. Jackson -is admittedly an acquired taste. What it loses in the thirst-quenching cold edge of other beers, it gains in "a gentler, and more subtle, palate.

According to "The English Pub," England turns out more than 1,000 brands of beer, but, unlike the product of other countries, each is strongly different. Mr. Jackson describes them with poetic discrimination: "the encounters with the unexpected, the possibility of either triumph or disaster, the pursuit of the elusive, the constant lessons, the bittersweet memories that linalist where beer is concerned. As he puts it, the attempt to use mass-production methods in making beer invoked the "Dunkirk Spirit" in English hearts and locally brewed beer revived. The author agrees with a Member of Parliament who described beer as "a moral species of beverage," something equivalent to milk in the United States. While an early advertisement for American whisky claimed that "it brought out kind feelings of the heart," Mr. Jackson does not agree, Beer is England's genius and nothing else will do. Some of the adjectives used by respondents in a scientific attempt to make "a sensory analysis of flavors" were "sickly tofee-like ... buttery ... nutry ... earthy ... cabbagy."

He does not even try to disguise the

Beer, according to the author, has been brewed since the Mesopotamian Age and the first alchouse in England probably dates to the first century A.D. Some surviving pubs have cellars or foundations going to the 12th or 13th centuries. It is curious to see a number of pubs next door to churches: Mr. Jackson explains that these "hospices," as they were once called, were built to house and nourish workmen during the long years required to complete what he regards as the only equally holy edifice "The English Pub" is as pleasant as its subject. The author is very learned in his field and he writes with suitable irony about the invasion of plastic and other hideous modern innovations into the timehonored pub. His history of the pub is a model of conciseness and he is especially good on inn and pub signs, some of which are splendidly illustrated in the book. When circumstances demanded, "The Pope's Head" metamorphized into "The King's Head." Pub keepers had to be careful in dedicating their houses to Queen Elizabeth, for she was so sensitive about her appearance that, in 1563, she commissioned an official portrait for use outside taverns, and issued a royal proclamation that all others "by unskillful and common paynters be knocked in pieces and cast into the fire."

English Eccentricity Pub names show English eccentricity at its most imaginative. There are "The Frog and Nightgown," "The Pig and Whistle," "The Goat and Compasses." This last may be a corruption of "God Encompasseth Us." At different times, pubs have served. as law courts, theaters and even hanging places. At "The White Hart," it was customary for the condemned man to have one last beer to fortify him against the fires of hell.

The origins of some of the games played in village pubs are lost in the mists of antiquity, but wellie-hoying, rhubarbthrashing, marrow-dangling, dwyle-flunk-ing and flighting still survive. Flighting, a trading of witty insults resembles the American game known as "playing the dozens." Wellie-hoying is a contest to see who can throw a Wellington boot farthest. The game are very nearly beyond de-

There is a chapter on eating in pubs that illustrates once more what an individualistic palate the Englishman possesses. In this section, we learn that suffolk cheese made dogs bark, "The English Pub" ought to make many readers growl, at least, with appreciation. Some subsequent trips were equally successful, but three years ago I was there when mist shrouded the mountain and the pond in late summer. No fish were caught.

Leaving Maine on the aforementioned trip, I thought of Bryant Pond. It offered, I hoped, a chance for me to rediscover the pleasures of taking a good trout on a fly. Always cooperative, Vic agreed to the project, and we reached the pond in early

Hospital Non-Solution

The weekend agreement that ended the four-day municipal hospital strike postpones but cannot avert and may ultimately aggravate a sorry day of reckoning for the city's Health and Hospitals Corporation and many of its employees.

The hospital employees' decision to give up a cost-ofliving increment was a generous gesture that buys a little time for fellow workers who had been scheduled for immediate layoff. If that time is used aggressively to overhaul drastically the grossly mismanaged Health and Hospitals Corporation, it may be possible to save some jobs that otherwise would be lost.

Unfortunately, prospects for such a course are not too bright. Even if the corporation could achieve administrative efficiency overnight, which remains unlikely, it will still have to cut its work force substantiallyperhaps by as many as 4,000 or more additional layoffs -in order to conform to budget limitations imposed by the city and state fiscal crises. The corporation is still far from achieving economies required by the city's financial plan and has not begun to cope with the new Medicaid reimbursement cutbacks that were announced by the state only last week-cutbacks estimated to total from $21 million to $23 million.

State and city officials glossed over these harsh truths in announcing the strike settlement. Instead of insisting that the corporation act to meet is budget responsibilities, as they have in the past, City Hall and Albany each contributed $5 million to the settlement potfunds that were uncovered by the same sleight of hand that characterized pre-crisis financing of labor

It has not yet been made clear how the state or the corporation is to make up for the Medicaid reduction, which state officials characterized as an essential economy and reform measure that would not be rescinded.

The strike settlement therefore may well generate false hopes. Although some of its members were deeply involved in the negotiations, the Emergency Financial Control Board should carefully examine this settlement to determine whether it constitutes a potential threat to the integrity of this city's financial plan.

Guns and People

The gun lobby is fond of proclaiming that "guns don't kill people; people kill people."

A recent gunshot death in Baltimore illustrates the lethal fallacy in the gun advocates' position. A woman on the street, but she ran out her front door when her husband said it sounded to him like a magnum. When she got outside, she heard a neighbor shout an incredible warning: "Watch out! That little boy has a gun. He shot the other boy." And so he had. Blond, attractive Jeffrey Krauch, 6 years old, with a gaping stomach wound inflicted by a powerful .357 magnum, lay dying in front of the woman's house.

Jeff's assailant had been a little boy 3 years old. The 3-year-old's brother, aged 6, had gotten mad at Jeff and had gone to find a pistol he knew about, cocked it and put it in his little brother's hand.

It is hard to conceive of any other way the 3-year-old, or the 6-year-old, for that matter, could have killed Jeff other than with a gun. It happens that that particular handgun was registered in a state that has fairly strict gun-control law. But, the gun was left around carelessly by an adult in a society that is generally careless about guns and makes them sufficiently accessible to constitute a continuing threat to the public safety.

Human beings are subject to murderous rages. The question is: What happens to that murderous intent while it consumes a person? It is quite clear that fists, feet, clubs and even knives are nowhere nearly as deadly instruments for even a fleeting murderous intent as are guns. If there had been no magnum, Jeff might have come away with a black eye, a scuffed shin and hurt feelings, but he would be alive.

Guns do indeed kill people.

Again—That 'Privilege'

Once again the magic phrases "executive privilege". and "national security" are being invoked by the White House in a court effort to withhold wiretap data from a Congressional oversight committee.

At issue is an outstanding subpoena served on the American Telephone and Telegraph Company by the House Subcommittee of Oversight and Investigations, seeking records of national security wiretaps over recept years. The subcommittee wants to ascertain that these taps genuinely relate to foreign intelligence missions and not illegal domestic surveillance. The Administration obtained a District Court order blocking enforcement of the subpoenas last week; the subcommittee is appealing and the case, if not settled by new negotiation, will almost certainly end up in the Supreme Court.

An interesting twist in the arguments is the Administration's contention that executive privilege can be invoked over the acts of third parties outside the Government-in this instance, the telephone company-on grounds that they were acting as executive branch agents in the technical installation of taps.

Data of the sort under subpoena is indeed sensitive, as the Administration claims, involving crucially important counterintelligence operations. Yet after all that has come to light about recent abuses, responsible Congressional investigators cannot simply accept without verification the word of the executive branch that everything was done in accordance with the law. And certainly a sweeping assertion of executive privilege cannot be allowed to stand without challenge.

As one Representative said in a noteworthy Congressional statement on executive privilege, "In a frightening proportion of these cases, the claim was made to cover up dishonesty, stupidity and failure of all kinds." That point was made on April 4, 1963, by the Representative from Michigan's Fifth District, Gerald R. Ford.

The most sensible way out of this impasse is not through another court fight on the murky battlefield on executive privilege, but through renewed consultation between the subcommittee and the executive branch, both of which have legitimate interests to protect. The executive needs careful assurances that sensitive intelligence data will not become available to unauthorized persons; Congress needs the facility to exercise its oversight responsibilities upon otherwise unchecked execu-

Bring Back the Bombs

Three decades after Hiroshima, only the five countries that are permanent members of the United Nations Security Council have become atomic weapons powers; but a great divide was crossed in May 1974.

A sixth nation, India, became the first developing country to explode a nuclear device, spurring the interest of other third-world nations in acquiring plants to extract plutonium explosive from spent reactor fuel rods. Pakistan and Brazil have now contracted to buy such reprocessing plants from France and West Germany. Iran and other developing countries have evidenced interest in doing the same. An adequate response to this proliferation danger has to be found.

India was known to have made its atomic explosive with spent fuel diverted from a Canadian research reactor. Now, after earlier denials, Secretary Kissinger has finally confirmed the "high probability"-diplomatese for "certainty"-that India also misused American heavy water provided on Indian assurances that only peaceful purposes were intended.

Canada has halted nuclear cooperation with New Delhi. The Ford Administration, incredibly enough, continued to ship nuclear fuel to India after failing to obtain an explicit commitment against extraction of plutonium for explosives from the spent fuel. Much vaguer assurances were accepted instead.

First Public Hearings

But recently, the Nuclear Regulatory Commissionover the objections of the State Department—has delayed shipments of enriched uranium to India and staged the first public hearings on a nuclear export license ever held. The results have been salutary, in the case of Iran and Pakistan, as well as India.

On India, the N.R.C. now is awaiting the outcome of a new State Department proposal: to seek Indian resale to the United States of its spent fuel, including that already stored, which contains 400 kilograms of unseparated plutonium, enough for 40 to 80 Hiroshima-size bombs. The Indians evidently have indicated willingness now to pay a price of this kind for new fuel.

Until the 1960's, return of spent fuel rods to the United States for reprocessing or storage was mandatory in virtually all "atoms for peace" arrangements. But this vital nonproliferation policy was mindlessly abandoned by the old Atomic Energy Commission.

Revival of this policy is urgent now, and a beginning appears to have been made in the recent American agreement to sell power reactors to Egypt and Israel. Both countries, initially reluctant, have now agreed that their spent fuel rods will be stored abroad and reprocessed there, if that becomes necessary, in facilities acceptable to the United States.

Hope for a Formula

Mr. Kissinger, on his current tour, has pressed Iran and Pakistan to accept similar arrangements. He appears to have had some success with Iran and-after threats to cut off economic and military aid-a formula may also be in sight to resolve the Pakistan issue. A general American "buy back" policy would be the most effective way to counter proliferation, particularly if France and West Germany are prevailed upon to follow suit.

What is most to be avoided is the accumulation around the world of stockpiles of separated plutonium, which could be diverted into bombs in a matter of days or weeks. But it is equally important to avoid any semblance of American approval for Indian plutonium reprocessing, which has no commercial purpose at present. The Indians may prefer to sell pure plutonium back to the United States rather than the spent fuel. That would help cover up reprocessing of any non-American fuel India may be able to obtain.

The United States will not be able forever to buy back and store the spent fuel of the entire world, as nuclear power production expands. Cooperation by other supplier nations and construction of multinational regional centers could ease the load. So could current research into possible ways to re-use spent fuel rods without extracting the plutonium first in explosive form. But, for the moment, many immediate dangers can be averted by a return to the old American policy of buying back dangerous spent fuel from nations the United States has supplied, especially when diversion to weapons production is suspected.

Mining the Seabed for All Nations

To the Editor:

A disturbing rift between the industrialized and third-world nations has developed at the Law of the Sea Conference, which opened this week at the United Nations, Economically advanced nations are inclined to use their technology to mine valuable minerals from the sea bottom, while the developing nations want to share in the benefits from these resources. Perhaps some old principles might help to bridge the rift. In 1941, Franklin Roosevelt and Winston Churchill pledged in the Atlantic Charter "to further the enjoyment by all States, great or small . . . of access, on equal terms, to the . . . raw materials of the world which are needed for their economic prosperity." They encouraged "the fullest collaboration between all nations in the economic field with the object of securing, for all, improved . . . economic advancement and social security....

A program based on these general but still meaningful principles would: (1) Give the third-world nations, as well as the landlocked and "zeographically disadvantaged" states. rightful access, along with the industrialized countries, to these resources. The world's raw materials under the high seas which are well removed from the territory of any nation should be fairly directed toward the economic development and increasing living standards of the men and women of all nations.

West Point: The System Indicted

To the Editor:

For over three months West Point has been beset by the largest cheating scandal in its history, the eighth to strike a service academy in 25 years. The public has been led to believe that the academy is seeking the facts honestly and responsibly. The accused cadets are portrayed as a disgraceful lot unfit for salvation. These points are simply untrue.

The Commandant, General Ulmer, has suggested those cadets facing charges are the only ones who cheated on this exam. Yet, the only charges pending are based on a comparison of exam papers. One Congressman, two prosecuting attorneys, two electrical engineering instructors (serving as government expert witnesses) and numerous other officers and cadets have testified that more than 400 of the 823 cadets who took the exam collaborated. One attorney testified that he told the superintendent, General Berry, if properly investigated, 300 to 600 cadets could be referred to trial. General Berry's only response has been to stop the most effective means of conducting a proper investigation—the grant of immunity which he had already extended to five cadets and which the commandant had offered to three.

I have never been charged with cheating but on May 20 I requested, through proper channels, that General Berry conduct an investigation of my allegations of widespread cheating. I provided him with a list of 74 cadets I suspected To date General Berry's only response has been to call the allegations, "filth, garbage, sewageunhealthy and unproven." The Academy represented my classmates as moral degenerates. But, even a cursory examination reveals that the involvedcadets represent nearly a perfect crosssection of the corps.

They have worked as hard, have the same desire and dedication that has served the academy, the Army and the United States for so long. They support the Honor Code as strongly as any cadet, they only ask for the opportunity to learn from their mistakes. If the system is "alive and well" as General Ulmer claims, then surely it can stand some constructive criticism from those who live under it. Before the academy can "dispose" of its "bad apples" surely, a full understanding of what has happened is necessary. If the system goes unchanged, it will only be a matter of time before America will be faced with the ninth scandal. TIMOTHY D. RINGGOLD

Then Nenni made the first of many blunders. He revived the "Unity of Action" pact with the Communists The story of how Italy arrived at that had been forged in exile during the point where a democratic Governfascism, and carried it so far as to ment must depend for survival on enter a joint slate with the Commu-Communist benevolence in Parliament nists for the election of 1948.

Nenni's decision foreclosed the possibility of forming an effective left-ofcenter non-Communist coalition as a democratic alternative to the Christian Democrats. It soon provoked a disastrous split in Socialist ranks, enaily on the capacity of these parties at bling the Communists to move decisively into second place. With the cold war coming on, Nenni had misread the temper of Italy's voters.

Eventually, the Socialists began to grope their way back toward the other democratic parties. Nenni finally led his party into a coalition Government in 1963, hoping to prod the Christian Democrats into long-overdue reforms and to halt Communist gains.

But in office, Socialists were no more effective and often no less corrupt than Christian Democrats. To many Italians, the "opening to the left" brought no better government, only a share of the spoils for Socialists.

In recent years the Socialists have floundered, moving into and out of Cabinets and bringing down governments for obscure reasons, conscious of the liabilities of alliance with a discredited Christian Democracy and terrified of being squeezed into insignificance between the Catholics and the Communists. The party that won more than 20 percent of the vote in 1946 fell below 10 percent last June.

The story of the Christian Democrats is one of a party too long in power but kept there partly because the Socialists failed over the years to build a credible, democratic alternative. It is a party of factions, held together only by the cement of Catholicism and the rewards of office. Above all, it has produced no effective leader since De Gasperi.

Idealistic young Christian Democrats who harassed De Gasperi for bolder postwar reforms soon learned to coexist comfortably with the traditional material rewards of public office in Italy and grew old contentedly playing the Cabinet game of musical chairs. Here is arguably the most corrupt party in Western Europe.

With a campaign devoid of positive content but focused on the Red menace, the Catholic party managed to retain its top position in the June election with 38.7 percent of the vote. But the Communists surged over 34 percent and gained 48 seats in the Chamber of Deputies.

Stung by their poor election showing. Socialists threw out their old guard and elected an energetic 42-yearold, Bettino Craxi, as leader. Despite the Communist challenge, the Christian Democrats conducted business as usual, eventually designating Giulio Andreotti to be Prime Minister.

Andreotti, is 57 and has been in most post-war Cabinets, serving twice as Prime Minister. He had to accommodate eight party factions in his Cabinet. But he has brought in seven newcomers, including the first woman and three eminent nonpolitical experts. He has retired a fair number of discredited party veterans including three former Prime Ministers. He has promised priority for reform of the public service and the administration of justice-pledges that could embarrass eminent Christian Democrats.

The Socialists for now are too embittered and divided to consider joining the Government. They are abstaining in Parliament along with other democratic parties and the Communists to allow Andreotti to get underway. But if he is serious about reform, he may be able to persuade Craxi to collaborate again, once election wounds have been healed.

Can two battered parties that have fallen so far short of their potentials in the past still find together the courage and energy to salvage Italy's democratic system? The task is not impossible, but the record over 30 years warns against euphoria.

Graham Hovey, a member of the editorial board of The Times, recently spent five weeks in Italy.

The Government of Ian D. Smith is on the defensive: Defeat of the pro-Western forces in Angola and the emergence of a Marxist dictatorship in neighboring Mozambique have blocked a major shipping route for Rhodesia, placing it in the position of a country left virtually surrounded by hostile neighbors.

The Government is at pains to prove to black Rhodesians and to the world that responsible white rule (with black participation, since there are 16 black Members of Parliament and 10 black Senators) is in their interest. However Kiplingesque and paternalistic it seems to support white rule in Rhodesia, an enlightened minority government, with an acute sense of guilt, could be a strong force for betterment.

In Rhodesia there is a small but growing black middle class that supports the Government but is reluctant to speak out from fear of reprisals from left-wing terrorists. Many of these blacks have risen to high positions within the civil service and in dusiness; they enjoy a comparatively efficient system of hospitals and public-improvement programs.

Black Africans' savings are increasing, and so is the general standard of living of the Africans. Although this black middle class is still too small to preclude the emergence of a leftwing dictator, at some future point they may serve as the bulwark for a democratic multiracial regime.

If the United States is willing to support another group of non-Africans in their struggle to survive in the Afro-Asian world—the Israelis—despite the charges of colonialism and in the face of the violent opposition of indigenous peoples and boycotts by its neighbors, why withhold support from the embattled Rhodesian settlers?

After all, some of these settlers' forebears put down roots in the country before the turn of the century, at a time when the state of Israel was only a gleam in the eyes of Zionists.

Private Universities and Private Enterprise

By Albert Rees

PRINCETON, N.J.—In recent years. several prominent Americans have complained that leading private universities are hostile to free enterprise. and have advised their colleagues not to make gifts to institutions that do not support our economic system. These remarks have bred unhealthy tensions between groups that in fact have much Private enterprises and independent colleges and universities are two of the principal sets of nongovernmental institutions in our society. They share the belief that we should advance and reward people who do demanding work on the basis of individual merit, rather then on seniority. They also share the view that leadership is important and that people must be trained to be leaders. Such beliefs are now often criticized as "elitist." Private universities do seek an elite when they select faculty and students. But they need not apologize for this, provided that it is an elite selected on the basis of acreligion, sex or social class.

We need men and women who are both talented and well-educated to provide leadership and creativity for. business, science, the arts and government. It is not undemocratic to encourage excellence, and if we do not subsidize their students, even students continue to do so, democracy will not survive for long private enterprise and private higher education is that both encourage diversity. In the market for goods, new products are constantly introduced, thriving or disappearing as they gain or fail to gain acceptance. Similarly, private universities are free to innovate, to offer new programs and settings to fit different tastes and needs. There is fortunately still much diversity among public institutions as well, but this may increasingly be inhibited by centralized state control.

Like a private business, a private college or university charges a price for its services, and must find customers who are willing to pay this price. A few small colleges have been unable to do so and have closed their doors. Other private institutions have become public. However, the stronger private colleges and universities have no difficulty in attracting well-qualified applicants.

Unlike businesses, most private colleges do not charge full cost for their services—if they did, tuition would be much higher than it is. They cannot charge full cost because they would complishment and potential, and not lose too many good students to public on such irrelevant factors as race, universities. If all colleges charged full cost, foo few students could afford college. In a private institution, the difference between tuition and cost is: covered by gifts and by income from able to prosper when faced by competitors who offer similar services at a much lower price.

Years ago, Thorstein Veblen attacked the private university because it was run by captains of industry. It seemed self-evident to him that if trustees were chosen in large part from corporate directors, private universities would be subservient to corporate interests. This fear has proved to be unfounded. Trustees of private universities have shown far more restraint in seeking to control educational policy to limit academic freedom than have the trustees of public universities chosen by elected officials.

Now private universities are under attack on the ground that they are hostile to free enterprise—that they have become ungrateful purps who bite the hand that feeds them. This view seems equally unfounded. In most university faculties there are a few radical professors, some of whom have a prominence in the press disproportionate to their influence on campus. But there are also many staunch conservatives.

When universities select professors for their ability in physics or history, they end by chance with people who hold diverse views on economic and social policy. Some of these views are sound and some silly; some silently held and some broadcast loudly. One would worry if this were not so. It would indeed be sad if a university failed to hire a talented mathematician Another basic similarity between greater extent. Their tuition covers a or social scientist because someone disagreed with his views on school

Private institutions take pride in being busing or abortion or the ownership of railroads. A political test for appointment to a university faculty would be totally inconsistent with the tradition of academic freedom, which means that expressing one's views freely will not affect security of employment, promotion, or salary,

The suggestion that corporations and other donors should support only those private universities that are friendly to free enterprise, and should withhold support from others, is well-intentioned but profoundly mischievous. It assumes that corporations have the capability, which they do not, to investigate the teaching programs of many different institutions. It raises unwarranted suspicions that will reduce support for private educational institutions as a group.

Is the university community in fact ungrateful for the support it receives? Not at all. Most students and faculty members deeply appreciate this support, but they are sometimes embarrassed to say so. They know that support comes as gifts and not bribes, and that if their views could be bought, they would not be worthy of respect.

Moreover, it is the scholar's profession to be skeptical, to raise questions, and to have doubts.

Both corporations and universities must keep earning the support of the public by continuing to serve it well, and the scholar must be a critical judge of this process.

Albert Rees, an economist, is provost of Princeton University.

Dead Planet

By Russell Baker

An intergalactic container has traveled incomprehensible distances searching for life on other planets. It is now descending on a tiny planet spinning around a minor star in an unmapped region of a lesser galaxy.

Its descent is monitored on its home planet by an excited group of bottles wearing long white coats. The bottles contain a highly intelligent form of gin, which is the dominant form of life on their planet. They are excited now because their explorer vessel is picking up and transmitting distinct signs of hangover from the strange little faraway planet.

At Lexington Avenue and 59th Street several thousand New Yorkers have noticed the descending container more or less simultaneously. It looks :to them like a small garbage can. It is coming down very slowly and is now at a height of 700 feet.

Most of the busy New Yorkers dismiss it with a glance and go about their urgent business. They do not want to look like gauche tourists gawking upward. In any case, in New York there are more curious things to gawk at than garbage cans in the sky.

The vehicle descends with dreamy indolence and pleasant interior gurglings. It plops delicately into the busy intersection. Brakes scream, fenders buckle, humdrum curses pelt it from passing buses, trucks, taxis, but the container cannot detect any of this. It is too busy extending its intricate gin detection gear.

Back at its home planet, the most distinguished gin of the scientific community is reading the data. It is not encouraging. The atmosphere of the host planet appears to be too hostile to support gin

Staggering quantities of carbon monoxide gas, compounded with fumes of very old, frying, sheep fat suggest an atmosphere in which gin, would find it almost impossible to reproduce the race.

Officers Perez and Flynn leave their squad car and try to lift the vehicle onto the sidewalk. It is surprisingly heavy. They call for a tow truck, but not before the container's cameras have transmitted incredibly clear pictures of their shoelaces.

To the 670 billion fifths of gin which inhabit its home planet, these shoelaces snaking in and out of neat evelets over the constabulary arches are utterly baffling. They could be sinuous beds of ancient up eons ago, or perhaps the ruins of some long-abandoned, archaic distilling device.

While the transmissions continue. a dog-walker pretends not to notice that his pets are using the intergalactic exploratory device for a fireplug. The device automatically responds by extending a sample scooper. It scoops up one of the dogs and thrusts it into its unbelievably complex interior for scientific analysis.

The home planet monitors study the computer readout with dismay. It registers nothing but a few low-grade nutrients, a quantity of hair, and some

It is decided to move the device to more promising territory. Obedient to intergalactic command, it rises slowly from 59th Street,

Officers Perez and Flynn are relieved. Now they will no longer have to write a report. A child points out that there is a garbage can flying north on Lexington Avenue, but he is hushed by the explanation that it is just another movie somebody is making about New York

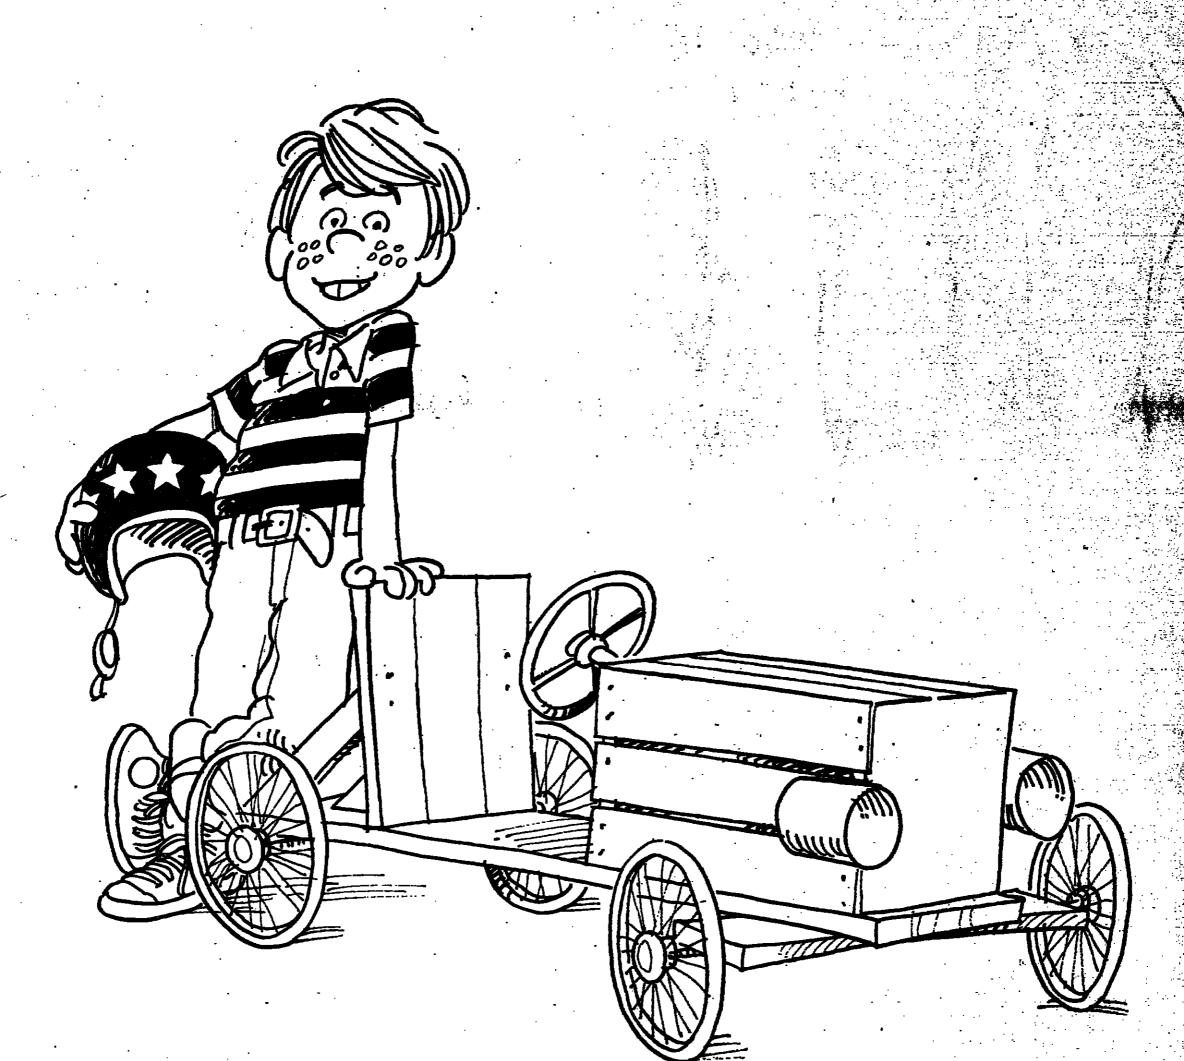

As it crosses 86th Street, a crowd in a movie line spots it. Everyone 🐠 😅 amuses himself by shouting, "Jump! Jump! Jump!" The vehicle cannot hear them. It is too busy picking up traces of gin throughout the entire sector.

Analysis reports at its home planet show, however, that this is gin of an extremely low order and utterly without the slightest trace of the intelligence characteristic of life. The gin analyzed in the vehicle's sampler shows no grasp of either the Pythagorean theorem or the first law of thermodynamics. It is such a sterile. form of gin that one can no more imagine it ever developing the atomic hangover than one could imagine vermouth inventing the ice cube.

By the time the vehicle has completed its short flight and come to rest at a curb in the Bronx, its masters are already meeting on the far shore of the cosmic ocean to issue orders for its move to the next planet. At this very moment, however, four young men are approaching it with tire irons.

It has been a disappointing job. The thing has had no bubcaps, distributor, with fenders or bumpers, and when they were finished the tangle of wires and shattered metal has netted them less than $2 apiece. They have kept the fleas, but will not realize it until to-

This is one driver who won't be hurt if America's oil companies are broken up.

However, if your car runs on gasoline...

There's a lot of talk in Congress these days about divestiture—breaking up America's oil companies. Some people claim this would lower oil prices. Exxon doesn't think it would. In fact, divestiture could put our country's economy on the same course as Junior's sidewalk racer—speeding downhill.

Tossing a good system out the window.

Breaking up companies like Exxon would shatter the most important benefits we offer: the experience, reliability and efficiency with which we serve you.

The key to this efficiency is something called vertical integration. More than 50 oil companies have integrated three or more phases of the oil business—exploration and production, transportation, refining, and marketing. Without this integrated system, layers of middlemen would enter the petroleum supply chain and efficiency would go out the window. The result: needless gasoline price increases.

It's worth noting that some 15 major U.S. industries, including autos, steel, textiles, rubber, food and newspapers also find vertical integration the most efficient way to do business.

More dependence on foreign oil.

Breaking up America's oil companies would also mean becoming more dependent on high-priced foreign oil. This is because divestiture would cause years of confusion and litigation. With the future structure of the industry unclear, few companies could commit to the risks and the huge investments it takes to explore for and develop new reserves of oil. As a result, domestic energy production would drop and more oil would have to be imported.

Justice, Misse

Thousands of competitors.

Finally, many who advocate breaking up the oil companies do so in the name of creating more competition.

The truth is America's oil companies comprise one of the most competitive industries in the world. More than 10,000 companies explore for and produce natural gas and oil. Over 100 companies operate interstate oil pipelines. Some 130 companies compete in the petroleum refining business. 15,000 companies sell bulk petroleum products. About 300,000 independent retail outlets sell gasoline. And no company in any of these areas has as much as 10 percent of the business. Breaking up the oil companies would not change any of these percentages. There would still be the same number of companies competing at each level.

In short, breaking up the oil companies would not increase competition. It would increase our dependence on imported oil. Today, more than ever, we should be building up America's energy capability...not breaking it up.
